

DWC Eyes Main Street Celebration

By BETSEY BURG DORF

At the Downtown Westfield Corporation meeting on Monday night, the board displayed a bronze plaque awarded to Westfield by the 2004 Great American Main Street Award program. Westfield received the award for its efforts in revitalizing the downtown area while keeping historic preservation in mind. Members of the DWC flew to Albuquerque, N.M. in April to compete against other designated Main Street communities from across the nation. According to Lee Hale Westfield competed against 50 out of 500 other designated Main Street Communities. Westfield shares the award with four other towns.

Along with the plaque, Westfield was awarded $2,500 to continue revitalization efforts, road signs and a certificate.

The DWC board recognized Mr. Hale for writing the application and securing letters of endorsement from a cross section of residents, businesses and property owners.

"This year is the first time the Northeast has won," board member and downtown property owner Joe Spector said. "We got together the right details that we might have been missing in the past."

Executive Director Sherry Cronin stated that Westfield would most likely be asked to sit on the jury who decides who the award will go to next year. "What a great thing for a great town," board member Frank Arena said.

The DWC is hoping to host a town wide celebration in honor of the award on Sunday, June 27, providing town council approves. A souvenir commemorative mug is being considered, and if it is approved will be for sale at the event.

Robert DeStefanis, a downtown property owner has resigned from the board and the DWC is seeking a property owner to replace him. Anyone interested in the position should contact Claire Grey at (908) 789-4041.

The board also discussed the approximately $400,000 operating budget it is seeking for next year, which was an item on the agenda of town council meeting held Tuesday night. The board is showing a slight increase in the budget, which translates to roughly a $7,000 or 1.8 percent increase.

Chairman Allen DeRose stated, "The net effect to the taxpayers would be a three to five dollar per year per household increase."

Taxes on downtown businesses and property owners fund the majority of the budget. Mr. DeRose continued by saying, "It is a modest increase for dramatic improvements downtown."

The $22,949 surplus from last year will appear on next year's budget as a normal line item as per the recommendation of the

Turf Field and New Track at Kehler Stadium To be Put Before Public For Vote in December

By ED COONEY

The Westfield Board of Education further discussed plans for the installation of an artificial turf field and a new track at Kehler Stadium at its meeting on Tuesday. Plans for a flat artificial field are underway.

The board's architect is consulting two separate artificial turf field companies to design a storm water drainage system to install along with the new field. The flat artificial field was chosen over a natural-grass crowned field due to its more even terrain and inherent drainage benefits.

Additionally, the board discussed its plans to renovate the field behind Edison Intermediate School.

New Jersey Environmental Protection Agency regulations also require the district to design a drainage system at Edison that allows the field to drain into the stream at the far end of the school's property.

Board Secretary-Business Administrator Robert Berman presented the board with a timetable for the project's eventual completion. Tuesday was the deadline for a storm water drain cost estimate. Documents that need to be filed by the board will be received on or about Monday, June 21, and the board will be required to approve various resolutions concerning the construction at its Tuesday, June 29 meeting. Assuming a successful referendum, construction would begin on June 1, 2005 and the new field could be ready for the 2005 fall sports season.

The board responded to an e-mail from a community member regarding the district's decision to place the new artificial turf field at Kehler Stadium and not behind Edison Intermediate School by listing the benefits Kehler has to offer. Among the benefits mentioned were Kehler Stadium's pre-existing stands, its ability to handle and accommodate crowds, and the presence of the recently constructed girls field house at Kehler.

Board Vice President Ginny Leiz was quick to point out that Edison is far from being ignored, noting that the district is installing a "high-quality grass field behind Edison." The field behind Edison is currently almost unusable due to poor field conditions and a pre-existing drainage problem.

Berman described the project at Edison as "fixing up something to make it more useable."

The artificial turf, new track, and field renovation projects will cost approximately $1.1 million that would be paid over a ten-year period. The board will seek a bond referendum from the community to cover the expenses. Berman determined that the state's approval process is not fast enough for the earlier proposed date of Friday, September 17 to seek out a bond referendum. The next available date for seeking such a vote is Monday, December 13 of this year.

Prior to the business portion of Tuesday's meeting, the board honored Linda Vail and Janice Sheridan, the recipients of the 7th Annual Optimist Awards for outstanding work SWINGING THROUGH THE AIR...McKinley Elementary School in Westfield held the McKinley Play-A-Thon Olympics on Friday. The students were able to enjoy the nice weather and compete in many activities, such as basketball, volleyball, soccer, cycling, a marathon and gymnastic climbing (as shown above). Fourth Ward Councilman James Foerst, Superintendent of Schools Dr. William Foley and McKinley Principal Claudia Andreski presented the medals to the winners at the closing ceremonies.

Freeholder Candidate, Ruotolo Clash Over Detention Center

By MATT MARINO

Discussion centered on the controversial George Herlich Juvenile Detention Center at the May 13 meeting of The Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Bruce Paterson, a Garwood resident and one of the four Republican freeholder candidates this year, spoke out against the freeholder board.

The meeting took place during the same week as the one-year anniversary of Edward Sinclair's death. Sinclair was found hung in his cell on Mother's Day of 2003, having been placed in the center only 12 hours earlier because of a bicycle theft.

His suicide led to heavy attention put on the center, as well as investigations on several government levels. Among other things, the center was found to have substandard conditions and suffered from constant overcrowding. While many of those problems were fixed, the freeholder board was under constant pressure to locate a site for a new detention center to be built.

Earlier this year, the board announced that the new detention center would be located in Linden, with construction to begin in the immediate future.

Last year, Yolanda Padilla, the mother of Edward Sinclair, led a protest at a freeholder meeting and demanding that the existing center be closed. Many of Sinclair's friends and family also showed up for the gathering. This year, Padilla marked the anniversary of her son's death with a candlelight vigil outside the facility. At the freeholder meeting, Paterson said he attended the vigil and was moved to speak about the center.

"It was very emotional...a lot of tears," Paterson said of the vigil, which he estimated to have around 60 people in attendance.

Paterson felt that the freeholder board had not done enough to prevent Sinclair's suicide, and even suggested that they were responsible for his death. He said that while last year the freeholder board declared it "The Year of the Family," Sinclair's death cast a shadow over that declaration. "You claimed it to be the year of the family, yet you destroyed a family," said Paterson.

Paterson said it was the freeholders' responsibility to look after Sinclair, and they failed to meet that responsibility. In addition, Paterson brought up the numerous projects undertaken in the county, such as the

Lamberts Mill Rd. Synthetic Turf Field Okayed by Council

By LAUREN PASS
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

On Tuesday night the Westfield Town Council unanimously approved an ordinance on first reading to bond over $1 million for various recreation improvements. The cost includes funding for the installation of a synthetic turf field and lights at the site of Houhlihan and Sid Faye fields on Lamberts Mill Road.

Before the meeting Third Ward Councilman Andrew Skibitsky questioned if some of the cost for the field would be passed off in the way of user fees, such as charging a price per child playing instead of the entire cost going to the taxpayers.

Town Administrator James Gildea

said that the Finance Committee is currently working with the recreation department on user fees.

The council also approved the first reading of the operating budget for the Downtown Westfield Corporation (DWC). The $377,920 budget is measured from a special assessment on downtown properties. There is no increase in the assessment this year.

First reading was also held on an ordinance that revises parking regulations for commuters and downtown residents. First Ward Councilman Sal Caruana was the only council member who did not vote in favor of it. The revised ordinance allows for daily parking in the South Avenue commuter lot at a rate of $5 per day and changes the enforcement hours of the commuter lots to 5 a.m. to 12 p.m. for permit holders. After 12 p.m. parking in the lot is free. Commuters holding a permit will also be allowed to leave their cars in the lots overnight.

Upon final passage of the ordinance downtown residents will have to pay a $360 yearly fee to park overnight in town. Residents will be required to park in the lot behind Baron's Drug Store. Currently parking is illegal in all municipal lots between 1 and 5 a.m. but it is not being enforced.

Caruana said that he didn't vote for the ordinance because there are some people who both live and work

Senior Citizens Express Opposition to Proposed MS Community Center

By BETSEY BURG DORF
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

At Tuesday night's meeting of the Mountainside Borough Council, a heated confrontation between a resident and the council compelled citizens presence. Many Mountainside citizens took the podium to voice their opposition to the proposed community center. Tempers became heated when one resident accused the board of "moving too fast."

The council, after years of discussing the lack of gymnasium space, hired an architect who has contacted community groups to determine what the biggest needs are. When the architect has adequately assessed the opinion of a cross section of residents, he will present his findings to the council. A meeting designated solely to the purpose of discussing the community center with the public will then be held.

Mayor Robert Vigilanti said that a non-binding referendum will be put on the November ballot saying simply: "Vote 'yes' if you are in favor of a community center, vote 'no' if you are opposed."

When Bill McNamara questioned the term "non-binding," Vigilanti said that regardless of the vote's outcome, the council could act as they see fit.

Vigilanti also said that the cost of the proposed center is hard to determine because there are so many unknowns. The board has yet to determine what the square footage of the center will be. Community need that has been prominent thus far is as follows: a gymnasium, physical fitness center, offices and storage. The board feels that the center proposed could cost approximately $6 million.

Bill Gianone, father and coach of an 11-year old son, called himself the silent majority in favor of the community center. "The 2003-04 basketball season had 11 teams fighting for gym space," Gianone said. "Every team used the same gym along with two school basketball teams and two school volleyball teams. Every team was given an hour a week to practice, which was sometimes cut to half an hour."

Deerfield School is the only gym available in Mountainside. The gym at the newly renovated Beechwood

School is not suitable for children over the age of eight or nine years old because it is not large enough. Gianone concluded by saying, "I am concerned (about taxes), but I find an overwhelming majority of the families I talk to feel this is a pressing need."

Recreation Director Sue Wynans addressed those in attendance saying, "We are busting at the seams trying to accommodate everyone, and I feel the kids are being shortchanged."

She stated that 290 children play basketball and 200 of those registered use the gym at Deerfield. School teams have the gym reserved until 7 p.m. most nights of the week. Given the ages of those involved in the program, games and practices usually end by 9 p.m., which does not leave much time to accommodate those involved.

Mayor Vigilanti urged the public to use the November referendum to voice their opinion and eventually had to cut the public participation section off due to the repetition of the comments.

The governing body plans on setting a date to discuss the architect's findings with the public sometime in September or October. A letter clearly defining the referendum will be sent in the form of a sample ballot to all residents prior to the vote so that any questions or concerns that may arise about the wording can be explained. The mayor assured the public the referendum would be clear-cut and precise.

In other business, the $4,640,091 budget was approved showing 4.2 tax points or roughly a $75 per household increase in tax dollars.

"We are mandated by county and state law to provide recycling. We were offered one bid and one bid only," the mayor said.

That bid showed a $74,000 increase over the now retired previous provider. Another factor driving the increase was a five-year plan to reimburse the state operated police and fireman retirement fund, which will cost Mountainside residents an additional $38,000 every year for the next five years.

"A large part of these taxes we are passing on to you are coming directly from Trenton," the mayor said.

DWC Proposes Celebration To Mark Main Street Award

town council. Others issues discussed were the condition of the downtown sidewalks and the town council's reluctance to help fund the renovations. Members of the DWC feel that 25 percent of the sidewalks downtown are in need of repair and should be a priority, with Chairman DeRose claiming, "The downtown is utilized by every single resident." The Sidewalk Replacement Project, a project offered by the Department of Public Works and funded by the town offering 50 percent reimbursement for all sidewalk repairs, has no money left and has begun a waiting list for those interested in the program. The DWC would like to suggest a sidewalk design that is aesthetically pleasing for those downtown property owners who are willing to help replace their sidewalk, but requires money from town council in order to hire a designer. The board would like to renovate and replace one block of sidewalk at a time and will urge town council to appropriate money in order to do so.

When discussing the parking redevelopment status, Mrs. Cronin stated that the DWC approached downtown employers, as well as employees to determine how many would agree to pre-purchase permits entitling them to a spot in one of the proposed parking decks. The permits would most likely cost $900 to $1,000 annually.

According to Ms. Cronin, there have been a large number of downtown employees who would be willing to purchase a permit "on good faith." The informal survey was taken so that, "We could go back to the council and say that the need is there and the commitment would be met," she continued.

Special Police Captain John Morgan presented to the board a brief demonstration of the new parking meter his department is considering. The meter would allow a 15-minute grace period for anyone "just running in for a cup of coffee," he said. The meter would not register overtime until the 15 minutes ran out. The meter does not allow the patron to push the "grace period" button more than once. If more time was needed, payment would be required.

The next meeting of the DWC is Monday, June 21 at 7:30 p.m. Meetings are held at the DWC offices located at 105 Elm Street on the lower level of the building.

new Union County Police building and the atrium currently being constructed at the Administration Building in Elizabeth.

In the meantime, he said, there was no money to upgrade the detention center.

It was suggested by Paterson that a plaque be erected at the new detention center in memory of Edward Sinclair, saying that "it appears that it was his death that really spurred you on to finally do something about the deplorable conditions."

Freeholder Mary Ruotolo directly responded to Paterson's remarks, expressing outrage and anger on behalf of the board that Paterson would suggest the freeholders had something to do with Sinclair's tragic death.

"Each time you come to this podium," said Ruotolo, "I find that you have no interest in the facts, nor do you have any care or interest in the truth."

Ruotolo felt that Paterson had no real interest in the detention center issue, but instead he was looking to capitalize on a sensitive topic to sway voters. She added that not only had he offended the freeholder board with his comments, but he also had insulted Sinclair's family.

"I think that it is absolutely deplorable that you would stand there and make that accusation," said the freeholder.

In other news, Freeholder Dan Sullivan announced that as part of New Jersey's ongoing conversion to digital drivers' licenses, the Rahway and Springfield motor vehicle offices are now able to process the new digital licenses. The new licenses are designed to provide greater security measures, thus making it almost impossible for people to make fake licenses for identification and other purposes.

downtown who shouldn't have to purchase two permits and move their car. He also said that though parking is a commodity, the council is putting a price on something when there is no demand.

Second Ward Councilman Rafael Betancourt, who also chairs the Public Safety, Transportation and Parking Committee, said that he has received requests from downtown residents to have night parking privileges. He said, "We have to pay for the things we use."

Fourth Ward Councilman Lawrence Goldman said that while he was voting in favor of the ordinance he thought the residential permit fee is too high.

At the start of the meeting DWC Executive Director Sherry Cronin presented the council with the Great American Main Street Award the town recently won in Albuquerque, NM. Westfield is one of five towns in the country to win the award this year, and the only town on the east coast.

Several residents spoke to the council regarding parking and the proposed redevelopment projects.

Jim Baker said with the recent influx of stores in the last five years Westfield does not, "sound like a town being strangled by a parking problem."

He said that Lot 8 on Elm Street, which is currently being used as an employee permit lot, should be combined at Lot 9 on North Avenue. He said that opening Lot 8 for use by shoppers would solve shoppers' parking problems. He also said that the number of permits sold for South Avenue should be increased to over 700. There are currently 627 permits issued for the lot with 643 people on the waiting list.

Allen Solomon told the council that by reducing the size of the proposed parking decks it defeats the original purpose of increasing parking. He also said that though the council is seeking to not put the burden of the parking decks on the taxpayers' backs, using parking revenue to offset the costs instead of the budget would affect taxes.

Jubb Corbet said that having a better parking system in town would benefit all property owners. He compared it to the school system having a positive effect on property values.

Nancy Rich said that she feels the town needs to build parking, as it is a shopping and entertainment destination.

Cory Mermer asked the mayor for information regarding recent closed-door meetings with the developer. Mayor Gregory McDermott responded that the council is still in negotiations and said "as soon as we get closer to what we feel we can live with" they will present it to the public. He said that it is the council's goal that the garages are self-sufficient and that the finance committee is going over projections with the developer and their financial consultants, Desmond Associates.

saying, "she makes all of the kids feel special."

"It is an honor to work with her," he said.

Members of the Roosevelt Student Council also spoke to thank Vail for her hard work and dedication. Vail herself also spoke to "thank the community for supporting its students."

Sheridan has been a Media Specialist at Edison since 1987. Edison Principal Cheryl O'Brien thanked Sheridan for her "happiness and joy in the library that is sensed by every student." Sheridan also spoke, commending the town's parents for fostering "a sense of community."

Superintendent of Schools Dr. William Foley gave the board a preliminary outline of the district's 2004-2007 Technology Plan. Foley's presentation included a number of goals and objectives that need to be met to fulfill those goals. Fifth grade students "will be able to use proper keyboarding techniques, complete a simple research report using a search engine and word processing software, prepare and interpret a simple graph and solve problems," according to the report. At the other end of the academic spectrum, twelfth graders "will use technology to collect data and monitor progress for a personal fitness program," and "be able to create a website that will address an issue in the humanities."

Foley noted that his presentation was "not a complete plan." Board member Richard Solomon expressed concern at the difficulty level of some of the presented assignments, saying, "I don't know if these objectives are aggressive enough."

The board saw a presentation from the Roosevelt chapter of Girls Learn International, a student group that highlights issues facing young girls around the world. In their slide-show presentation, the girls recited a part of the United Nations' Universal Declaration of Rights concerning the education of women. Denying proper education to young girls around the world, they said, "blocks countries' development and the elimination of poverty."

The group's goal is to "encourage young women to become advocates of positive social change." The Roosevelt chapter of Girls Learn International is partnered with the English Language Institute in Kabul, Afghanistan. Through translators, girls from both schools have exchanged letters and actively write to one another.

WE LIKE BINGO BETTER...Students at Tamaques Elementary School in Westfield filled their spare time playing bingo during Family Bingo Night, a popular event held during TV-Free Week.

Tamaques Pupils Marked TV-Free Week With Events

WESTFIELD—Students at Tamaques Elementary School in Westfield observed TV-Free Week as part of a national program which encourages children and adults to turn off the television and find alternate ways of spending spare time, such as reading, playing games, and enjoying the outdoors.

During each day of TV-Free Week, the students completed a form attesting that they did not watch television. All participants received a treat coupon each day from a local business as a reward.

For example, students who sacrificed four days of television earned coupons for Manhattan Bagel in Westfield, Rita's Ices in Rahway, Linden Lanes in Linden, and 7-11 in Westfield. The Town Book Store in Westfield also offered a discount to the students in order to promote reading.

Tamaques Principal Michael Cullen issued a challenge to the pupils: if the 485 students accumulated 1,500 TV-Free days, they would be rewarded with extra recess time. By Friday of TV-Free Week, the students exceeded this goal and Principal Cullen followed through with his promise.
