avenue in Westfield. The administration building and Crossroads School are situated at 45 Cardinal Drive in Westfield.

According to the UCESC website, Beadleston High School provides an educational environment for "uncomfortable teens who need emotional support." Westlake School caters to primary and secondary students with physical and mental disabilities. Crossroads School provides a "pre-school and early childhood program" for students with autism and pervasive developmental disorders.

The Hillcrest Academy locations are for "students who have the intellectual ability to achieve but who need a highly structured, personalized environment in which to succeed," Ms. Hunnicutt said.

Hillcrest Academy South, adjacent to Kehler Stadium, is leased from the Westfield Public Schools. Due to student crime complaints, the Westfield BOE has decided not to renew the Hillcrest South lease for next year. UCESC officials have said they intend to appeal this decision to the New Jersey Department of Education (NJDOE).

According to records provided by the Scotch Plains tax collector, the Hillcrest North property is owned by AM School Associates, located at 433 North Broad Street in Elizabeth.

School districts are legally obligated to fund the expenses of students who are determined to need special education that their districts are unable to provide. According to Ms. Hunnicutt and Mr. Nowlin, most of the Westfield and Scotch Plains-Fanwood special needs students are not enrolled at UCESC. They are sent to other public or private school districts.

Ms. Hunnicutt said the average cost per student that Westfield pays to send students out-of-district is between $35,000 and $50,000.

Scotch Plains-Fanwood Public Schools sent nine students to UCESC facilities this year at a cost of $205,574, said Mr. Beese.

According to the UCESC budget, 97.5 percent of the commission's revenue comes from school districts, while state and federal aid provide the remainder.

"Each sending district pays for its own students," Ms. Hunnicutt said. "We (Westfield Public Schools) don't pay for any student who lives in any other town."

According to the New Jersey state Office of Planning, there are 566 municipalities in the state. The school districts associated with municipalities present their budget for public vote and approval each spring. The other school district budgets are not subject to public vote. The county superintendent of schools transfers commission budgets to the NJDOE.

goleader.com broke the story with a special announcement online that day.

Mr. Foley anticipates assigning an interim principal until a new search and selection process is completed. The selection process began in February after Mr. Petix, who has been principal for 26 years, announced his retirement.

The district performed a national search for a new principal, using feedback from a community survey, and included members of the public and high school students in the selection process. The survey is available on the district website, westfieldnj12.org.

WHS principal Robert Petix's salary is $155,809 per year.

"I am not at liberty to reveal the offering made to Mr. Akey," School Community Relations Coordinator Lorre Korecky told The Leader.

WHS Assistant Principal Noah Tennant will be resigning effective June 30 to accept a principal position at Haddonfield Middle School in South Jersey and assistant principal Robert Eyre has announced his retirement effective January 1, 2007.

Town Council liaison to the DWC Sal Caruana expressed doubts. He said, "I'm not sure how restrictive we can make it. We want to be as restrictive as we can be."

The promotions committee plans to print full-color brochures in The Star Ledger to advertise the 10th annual Sweet Sounds Downtown Jazz Festival. These brochures will also promote local restaurants.

"It is a nice and different way of promoting our jazz," Ms. Cronin said.

Councilman Caruana ended the meeting by telling board members the town council plans to legalize alcohol service to the outdoor tables of restaurants to fit the habits of the people who dine at them.

The next board of directors meeting is on Monday, July 17 at 7:30 p.m.

Superintendent Hartnett Discusses Role of UCESC

By DON WILLIAMS

Specially Written for The Westfield Leader and The Times

WESTFIELD - Edward Hartnett has been the superintendent of the Union County Educational Services Commission (UCESC) for 26 years and will retire at the end of June.

The Westfield Leader had the opportunity to meet with Mr. Hartnett to discuss his career and the organization he heads, which he says is "largely unknown to the public."

The UCESC was established in 1969, with representatives from 12 Union County public school boards. Today, the UCESC has a "two-tiered governing body," as Mr. Hartnett put it, with a representative assembly that meets at least twice a year to elect members of the Board of Directors and to approve the budget; the board of directors, comprised of members of the representative assembly (elected members of the boards of education in Union County), meets monthly.

School districts are required by law to send students out of district to provide services required by these students' individualized education plans (IEPs) if the home districts cannot provide. County-level educational service commissions and similar organizations are responsible to work with the districts to find the best fit for these students' needs.

The mission of the UCESC, Mr. Hartnett said, is twofold: to provide educational services to students who are placed in its programs for students with special needs, and to arrange for transportation for all students in Union County whose IEPs require out-of-district placement.

Under Mr. Hartnett's leadership, the UCESC has grown in programs and facilities. The commission acquired land to build the Beadleston and Westlake Schools on Lamberts Mill Road in Westfield in 1997. It developed property in 2000 on Cardinal Drive in Westfield for administrative offices and the Crossroads School.

Mr. Hartnett discussed the history of Hillcrest Academy, a program operated by UCESC with two campuses serving at-risk Elizabeth students.

"Every Abbott district requires that an alternative program is required for at-risk students," he said, referring to the Abbott v. Burke lawsuit concerning the funding of schoolchildren in minority-dominated urban districts. "Elizabeth has major space limitations; all of [Elizabeth's] schools are bursting at the seams. As there is no space for an alternative high school in Elizabeth, Hillcrest Academy was created to accommodate some of these students," Mr. Hartnett said.

The Hillcrest program began with 60 students in Scotch Plains in 1995 and expanded to the former Lincoln School on Westfield Avenue in Westfield in 2004. The program currently enrolls roughly 150 students.

Mr. Hartnett cites transportation as the UCESC's largest expense.

"We save millions of dollars every year [by organizing a sort of carpool system for busing students from the county], and still transportation is close to $20 million...The cost of transportation is astronomical," he said. "Each bus is contracted separately, with about 350 contracts organized each year from roughly 40 bidding transportation services. UCESC is required by law to choose the transportation company for each bus with the lowest bid."

Before the creation of the UCESC, districts were required to arrange instruction and transportation for their students requiring out-of-district placement. Mr. Hartnett told The Leader that in the late 1960s, the County superintendent of schools encouraged a centralized organization to act as an intermediate public education agency to "maintain administrative responsibility" for the county's educational programs.

Looking back, Mr. Hartnett said, "It's been a great career. I have found it very rewarding to serve thousands of disabled kids. During my 36-year career as an employee of the UCESC, I have seen the district develop into what it is today."

After retiring, Mr. Hartnett plans to travel and stay active as an advocate for the disabled community.

For more disabled information regarding the UCESC and its budget, please read the corresponding front-page article in this week's issue.

70 students, which is the maximum capacity for the building."

AM School Associates of Elizabeth owns the Scotch Plains property and has leased it to UCESC since 1995. According to Mr. Hartnett, UCESC pays $153,000 per year to lease the facility.

"The only problem that we have had there is a noisy air conditioner," Mr. Hartnett said. "On occasion, there are complaints from neighboring residents about the kids encroaching on property, which is the extent of complaints."

According to Scotch Plains police records obtained by The Leader, there have been approximately 74 calls made to the facility over the past five years; 21 of those calls were made in 2005, and 9 have been made since January of this year. Reported incidents range from weapons possession (knife), bomb scare, simple assault, harassment, drug possession, false alarms, non-criminal complaints and theft.

Mr. Hartnett said that there are metal detectors in all of the UCESC secondary education buildings and that there is one full-time security guard at the Scotch Plains campus.

Mr. Hartnett will retire on July 1. His replacement, William Petrino, is the current UCESC superintendent in Rahway.
