It's Dark Now And Pedestrians Encounter Increased Danger

Winter and daylight saving time results in gray afternoons and dark evenings. This change of time of the year. The last day of December will be here very shortly, and this is the shortest day of the year. Many don’t adjust well to this sudden change in loss of daylight.

When everyone leaves work during this time of the year, it’s dark. It’s hard to see while driving and it’s particularly hard to see pedestrians. Pedestrians also don’t see very well, as are they as well they need to be, and assume drivers see them. This condition has resulted in unfortunate pedestrian deaths every day for the last few years.

The busy local thoroughfares, such as North Avenue and East Broad Street in Westfield, have proven dangerous, especially in the late afternoons and dark evenings in our area. Night weather rolls in, ice and snow are bound to make buying yourself or the kids new winter coats, try to especially don’t.

The time to remonstrate yourself to children always at the cross walks, and if you’re thinking about buying yourself or the kids new winter coats, try to buy bright colors.

Drivers, as their normal ritual to get home, should remember how unsafe it is this time of year. Expect pedestrians to do unusual things because they will.

Remember not to pass on the right through the leaf piles, as children may be at play. As the winter weather rolls in, ice and snow are bound to make road conditions worse; take it slow and stay alert. Joggers and bicyclists need to be more on guard than usual, because of the diminished visibility. Make sure the reflection on your bikes are cleaned off and in good condition. Both joggers and cyclists should consider investing in turning a blinking light to make them more visible.

Remember that many “out of town” drivers pass through the area all time. These drivers do not know the conditions of our local roads or the busyness of pedestrians on them. They leave as alert as you.

We’d like to hear your suggestions on this issue. Let’s make our wintertime as safe as possible this year by staying alert.

The Night Before Thanksgiving, All at The Trolley were Jolly

Regardless of where you’ll spend it, Jolly is a Jolly the Trolley way to go if you’re spending Thanksgiving dinner with the family and it’s a perfect way to enjoy the evening. The Trolley is a fun way to get out and enjoy the nightlife. It’s a great way to get a break from driving.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I am the son of a hematologist (who treated my father for myeloma, and serves as a volunteer at the American Cancer Society) and a nurse practitioner (who treats many patients I have seen through the Merck Pharmaceuticals). I am writing to bring attention to the issue of Opioids and the growing Opioid epidemic. We have been hearing a lot about the dangers of Excedrin and the use of Opioids in the medical field.

Recently, I have received numerous letters from patients who have been diagnosed with chronic pain conditions. Many of these patients have been prescribed opioid pain medication. I have also heard from patients who have been prescribed opioid medication for chronic pain conditions who have developed opioid addiction.

I encourage all healthcare providers to be aware of the dangers of Opioids and to be cautious when prescribing these medications. We must also continue to educate the public on the risks associated with Opioid use.

Sincerely,

Dr. John Smith
Hematologist and Nurse Practitioner

Please, Garwood Council Members,

Ditch Language On Killing of Snakes

I am writing to ask Garwood Council Members to consider ditching language on the killing of snakes.

In the past, when snakes were found on property, there was a significant amount of confusion and anger. People were concerned about the safety of children and pets. In response, the Garwood Council Members passed legislation prohibiting the killing of snakes.

This legislation was intended to protect children and pets, but it has not been effective. Snakes have been found in Garwood, and in many cases have been killed.

I would like to suggest that Garwood Council Members consider ditching language on the killing of snakes. This would allow for a more flexible approach to snake control, and would better protect the environment.

Thank you for considering my request.

Sincerely,

John Smith
Garwood Resident

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my concern about the recent trend of introducing new words into our language.

In recent years, there has been a significant increase in the number of new words being added to our language. This is a worrying trend, as it can lead to confusion and misinterpretation.

I believe that it is important to have a well-defined and consistent language. This will help to ensure that everyone can communicate effectively, and that there is a shared understanding of the words we use.

I encourage all language users to be careful when introducing new words into our language. We should only introduce new words that are necessary and that are clearly defined.

Sincerely,

John Smith
