Fire Safety Tips Given for A Safe Christmas Season

TRENTON — The New Jersey Department of Community Affairs' Division of Fire Safety joins local fire departments and local fire officials in issuing safety precautions in an effort to prevent fires that often result during the holiday season.

There are simple steps families can take to prevent fires during the holiday season.

Candles: It is best to use battery-operated candles, which have all the essentials of a live candle, without the fire risk of an open flame. pillar candle, one with a thick base or ideally one contained in glass, is a better choice. They have a wider platform on a surface and are less susceptible to being knocked over. Placing one inside a glass globe offers even more protection. Keep any candle away from flammable surfaces by at least a foot, including draperies, curtains, and loose fabric of any kind.

When a candle is extinguished, use a metal candel snuffer. Blowing out a candle may send a hot ember to a flammable surface.

Christmas Trees: Take advantage of fire-resistant alternatives to live trees. If using a live tree, keep the tree well-watered, away from any heat source, and disposed of at the first sign of dryness.

Decorations: Fireplaces draped with stockings and other décor are a fire hazard, but Yule Log alternatives are available via streaming services and on the web, and offer the added benefit of accompanying holiday music.

Alternative heating devices: Make certain your heater has an Oxygen Depletion Sensor (ODS) sensor. ODS sensors are found in units made after 1984 and will turn off the heater if it senses high levels of carbon monoxide. If using an electric heater, make certain the extension cord is 14 gauge or larger.

Do not use a lightweight cord and run it under the rug. Make sure the device has a protective grill in front of the heating element, which is the part that glows. Turn the heater off when you leave the room. Keep young children at least three feet away from heating devices. Keep bedding, curtains, and clothing three feet away from the heater, as well. Plug directly into wall outlets. Never use with a household extension cord. Make sure the device has a "tip over" switch that turns the heater off if it's knocked over.

The most effective defense in preventing a fire emergency continues to be a working smoke and CO alarm on every level of the home, coupled with a family escape plan.

CASA Hosts Holiday Mix And Mingle For Volunteers

GARWOOD — Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) of Union County recently kicked off the holiday season for its more than 160 CASA volunteers invited to gather with staff and board members for a Mix and Mingle at Rosie's Wine Bar in Garwood.

CASA volunteers are community members who train to become advocates for Union County's abused, neglected and abandoned children placed in foster care and report to the court on their wellbeing. From myriad wines to tasty small plates, those who mixed and mingled had plenty to enjoy — including the chance at door prizes. As the numbers were called, folks scrambled to check their tickets and cheered for those who won.

"What a fabulous evening — so many of our volunteer advocates came to catch up with training classmates, share about their lives and their CASA cases and simply enjoy an evening to celebrate during the holidays. And that night out is precisely what we wanted give them, especially after all they do to ensure the foster children they advocate for have as much normalcy as possible despite the chaos and loss surrounding them," Executive Director Marla Higginbotham said.

There are nearly 600 Union County children in foster care right now and CASA of Union County serves approximately half. Its goal is to provide an advocate for every foster child that needs one. To do that, more community volunteers are needed and encouraged to attend an information session to learn more about how to step up for a child.

Most CASA volunteers have no prior knowledge of the foster system and varied backgrounds. For example, a recent graduating class ranged from age 21 to 81 and were parents and non-parents, retirees, students, business professionals, a teacher, nurse, attorney, professor and homemakers. CASA volunteers are the eyes and ears for Family Court judges and have access to the child and all parties in the child's life.

For details on upcoming information sessions as well as trainings in the new year, contact Courtney at cgreen@casafunioncounty.org or (908) 293-8136, visit www.casafunioncounty.org.

Westfield Board of Health Held a Meeting on December 4, 2017

A board hearing was conducted as one food establishment had a second conditional rating in a row. The board provided the department with direction intended to ensure that the establishment will comply with the sanitary code should they not be able to achieve a satisfactory rating upon the next inspection. Details of the hearing will be available when meeting minutes are approved at the next board meeting.

The board reviewed the Westfield Regional Health Department reports for November. In November, the department conducted twenty-five inspections; fifteen resulted in satisfactory ratings, five (walk-in or complaint investigations) resulted in no rating and five were found conditionally satisfactory. Several instances of mishandling or illegal dumping of garbage were noted in the reports; all businesses and residents must have garbage service.

Five schools were audited for compliance with maintaining proper immunization records. Four were public schools and one was a parochial school. All schools were 100 percent in compliance.

Overlook Medical Center is offering glucose and blood pressure screenings on the following Mondays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.: January 8, 22, 29, and February 5, 12, and 26. These screenings will be held at the Overlook Downtown Center located at 357 Springfield Avenue, Summit. Each of these screenings requires pre-registration and there is no fee. Call 1-800-247-9580 to register.

Information on the health department's activities and useful information can be found on the website at www.westfieldnj.gov/health.

The next meeting of the Westfield Board of Health will be on Monday, January 22 at 5:30 p.m. in the Westfield Municipal Building; the public is invited to attend.

Mayor Expects Affordable Housing Settlement Soon

By FRED T. ROSSI

Specialty Written for The Westfield Leader and The Times

SCOTCH PLAINS — Mayor Alexander Smith last week provided an update on downtown redevelopment efforts, saying he expects a final settlement of the township's affordable-housing obligations by month's end and hopes the planning board can start public hearings on the first phase of the redevelopment effort in February.

At the downtown redevelopment committee's meeting last Wednesday, the mayor said that, pending final "dotting of the I's and crossing of the T's," he was confident that, by the end of the month, "we'll have a signed agreement with the court" regarding what the township's affordable-housing obligations will be. It is expected that about 3,000 new housing units — with about 450 of those deemed "affordable" — will be built in Scotch Plains over the next eight years, with slightly less than half to be located in and around the downtown business district as part of the overall redevelopment effort.

The mayor also noted that a planner's report on the 63 properties in the central business district along Park Avenue has been submitted to the planning board for review in advance of public hearings expected to get underway in February. The report includes recommendations regarding which of those properties should be designated as an Area in Need of Redevelopment. Such a designation would give the municipal government much greater control over redevelopment of those properties.

The mayor also said the township is starting the process of requesting state transportation officials to revise traffic patterns on Park Avenue, which is crowded with large trucks throughout the day and which local officials see as a detriment to a revitalized downtown business district. The aim is to redirect truck traffic to Terrill Road instead, and Police Chief Ted Conley said last week that he is working on additional steps to ease traffic, including allowing Park Avenue to run directly across Route 22 and installing jug handles to allow trucks to go up to the Weldon Quarry directly from Route 22.

In other business at the December 13 meeting, Thomas Stowe, the township's project coordinator for redevelopment, reviewed the results of a month-long survey of residents about a possible new and expanded library and a possible community center. Of the 773 who completed the survey, 58 percent felt the library was very important to the community, with 71 percent using it to borrow books, 40 percent using the children's area and 31 percent taking part in children's programs.

Forty-eight percent said that Scotch Plains needs a new and expanded library while 30 percent said there was no such need. On the question of whether a community center is needed, 58 percent responded affirmatively while 20 percent saw no such need.

A separate survey of committee members about the concept sketches shown last month for the library property found that most members who participated wanted new buildings of three to four stories high in that area. Several submitted photographs of downtowns with building designs they liked, including Garwood and Princeton. All respondents favored keeping the library in the downtown. About half backed a public-private partnership when it comes to a new library building, with some commercial space being available in a new library building, as is the case in Rahway.

All committee members signaled their support for closing the first block of Bartle Avenue to traffic, although there were concerns expressed about the impact on local traffic and the handful of private property owners on that first block. There also was support for including underground or under building parking garages in the redevelopment.
