John F. Hogan, III, 83, Was Former Resident of Westfield For 38 Years

John F. Hogan III (Jack) peacefully passed away while at the VNA Hospice House of Vero Beach, Fla., on Thursday, February 23, 2017, at the age of 83. Jack will always be known for his outgoing personality, friendly smile and great sense of humor. He resided in Vero Beach after retiring there from Westfield, N.J.

John F. Hogan III

Jack was born on November 8, 1933 in Norristown, Pa., to Veronica and John F. Hogan II. He graduated from Norristown High School, and later, Penn State University. Jack was on his high school baseball team and also played in the American Legion league. While at Penn State, he was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity and the Penn State Lacrosse team. He studied chemical engineering and graduated in 1955. Jack was a lifelong Nittany Lion fan and was able to attend many football games as an alumni. On most fall Saturday afternoons, he could be found watching his football team play on television while wearing his Penn State shirt. He was a Nittany Lion Club and Penn State Alumni Association life member.

Jack served in the U.S. Navy from 1955 to 1962 as a lieutenant in the Communications Division. Jack became a naval officer after completing Officers Candidate School in Newport, R.I. He was stationed in Hawaii and California and spent a month-long tour of the Pacific SE with Admiral H.G. Hopwood. He was attached to the USS Thetis Bay helicopter carrier. Later in life, he continued his involvement with the Navy by joining the Navy League, Treasure Coast Council in Vero Beach, Fla., where he served on the board of directors. Jack was recently honored by the VNA for his military service.

Jack married his wife of 60 years, Joan Walker Hogan, also of Norristown, Pa., in 1956. She was the center of his life and their marriage bond remained strong over the years. After several years in Cincinnati, Ohio with Sun Oil Company, the Hogans transferred to Westfield, N.J., where they lived for 38 years. He and Joan were members of the Westfield Tennis Club and Echo Lake Country Club, where they spent many hours of social (and competitive) play. Jack was a sales and marketing manager for Sun Oil for 20 years and a global sales manager for Witco Chemical Corp. for 25 years. His business took him to international locations, such as Russia, Australia and England. Jack always excelled in business negotiations with his clients. He officially retired but remained as a consultant for Witco for two more years.

In 1998, the Hogans moved to Grand Harbor in Vero Beach, Fla. Jack enjoyed playing golf and bocce with his friends at Grand Harbor as well as attending meetings of the Grand Harbor Audubon Club. He also made annual trips to watch spring training games of his beloved New York Mets in nearby Port St. Lucie. He and his wife enjoyed traveling abroad, most recently to Spain/Portugal and a trip to Ireland with their daughters. Jack was always proud of his Irish heritage and was thrilled to travel to the land of his relatives. Jack and Joan enjoyed performances at Riverside Theatre, Space Coast Symphony and the Distinguished Speaker series. They are members of St. Mark's Anglican Church in Vero Beach, Fla. Jack volunteered and held leadership roles in various civic and charitable organizations in Westfield and Vero Beach, such as the Westfield Jaycees, the Joint Civic Committee, the Indian River Neighborhood Association, Christ Church and Trinity Episcopal Church. After Hurricanes Frances and Jean hit the area, Jack was in charge of the roof restoration for the Newport Island Homeowners Association. He was a member of the Eagle Society for the Indian River Medical Center.

Jack is survived by his wife, Joan; daughters, Valerie Hogan Casillas (David) of Dallas, Tex. and Kimberly Hogan of San Francisco, Calif., and his grandson, Kyle John Casillas. Jack's family meant everything to him and he had an especially close relationship with his two daughters. He loved to listen to Kim play the piano. He was extremely proud of his grandson's accomplishments in school, on the lacrosse field and in the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

A memorial service will be held at St. Mark's Anglican Church, 1795 45th Street, Vero Beach, Fla., today, Thursday, March 2, 2017, at 11 a.m. A reception will follow at Grand Harbor Golf and Beach Club. Memorial donations may be made to the Grand Harbor Community Outreach Program, the Alzheimer & Parkinson Association of Indian River County or a charity of your choice.

Arrangements are under the direction of Strunk Funeral Home and Crematory of Vero Beach. An online guestbook may be signed at www.strunkfuneralhome.com.

YOUNG AUTHORS...First graders at The Wardlaw-Hartridge School in Edison presented their own written work and illustrations at class publishing parties in Lower Snowdon. The students went through the entire writing process, beginning with a rough draft and various stages of editing. Pictured above, Stella DeSantis of Westfield shares her book during the publishing party.

The Student View

A column written by local high school students

By ZOE RADER
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader and The Scotch Plains-Fanwood Times

I began my first day in Western Kenya jetlagged and hungry. Luckily, my mom prioritized protein bars and packaged cereal over an extra shirt in her luggage. I downed a bag of Cheerios and we trudged through the day; it was this strange juxtaposition of amazement and just-let-me-crawl-into-my-bed-already irritability.

The company my mom works for, Vestergaard, was beginning their annual Follow the Liters campaign: a massive distribution of their innovative product, LifeStraw Community that filters large amounts of contaminated water. I was along for the ride; an aspiring, pesky journalist and daughter of the communications director who barely managed to fill a volunteer spot. Throughout the week, I would find myself utterly amazed as we traveled to countless schools, received overwhelmingly grateful reactions to the filters and met some of the most amazing and inspiring students. I would be introduced to incredibly smart and kind locals who were impassioned by an unyielding sense of community and genuine happiness. I would open my eyes to adversities I could never have imagined existed—adversities completely foreign to a white privileged girl from northern New Jersey.

Nevertheless, nothing impacted me more than what I learned in a two-hour training session.

As expected, they familiarized us with basic Kenyan formalities: Greet someone with a firm shake and eye contact, jambo means hello and if the principal offers you a soda it is polite to drink it (after three lukewarm Sprites in the field, my mom and I would sneakily pour them out to aid our growing dehydration). But then we diverged into a conversation about the Kenyan education system. I learned that Kenyan schools don't have basic supplies—sometimes they don't even have classrooms. I learned that often the ratio of teachers to students is 1:120. I learned that young girls are forced to stay home from school during their menstrual cycles because they cannot afford basic feminine products.

When we arrived at each school everything they had said—the chill-jerking facts that I pretended were not true—came to life. I saw shoeless children with meager backpacks and a torn notebook. The classrooms were small and sparing; some didn't have doors, others had broken glass windows that were waiting for the blood of an innocent hand. The teachers were kind, but clearly tired.

Now is the part where I am supposed to say how lucky I am to be a student in Westfield, New Jersey. But, I can't just say that. It doesn't equate to how lucky I am and how grateful I really should be.

I am a student. I am one of those kids. But, I go to school every day yawning or complaining or wishing the day was over. I open up my backpack to a world of supplies and go to Spanish class irritably dreading the absence of air conditioning in that room. I do my homework half-heartedly or with annoyance. I'm not saying all this will change with my undoubtedly eye-opening experience, but I do think it will make me more appreciative. It will make me walk into my four-walled, lit classrooms with a slight smile and look at my peers with a less fierce-like competitiveness. It will make me drink a Sprite when it is given to me, kindly and out of pure gratitude, by the hand of a teacher who instructs 120 students eight hours a day in the equatorial heat.
