

WHS Considers Candidates For Guidance Director

By MEGHAN GILL
Specialty Writer for The Westfield Leader

WESTFIELD — The town's board of education heard a report from the Westfield High School (WHS) Guidance Department at its October 11 meeting.

The report, presented by Joan Sullivan, interim supervisor of Guidance, outlined the efforts made to improve college relationships and how the department has become familiar with the students, goals, objectives and achievements from the 2004-2005 academic year.

WHS added four new counselors to its team. Currently, the student-to-counselor ratio is nine to 185, including the support of 45 seniors each. Superintendent of Schools Dr. William Foley is considering two candidates for the director of guidance position.

The selection process has taken a long time because, WHS Principal Dr. Robert Petix explained, "We want a quality person to improve the department, it's hard to find people."

Ms. Sullivan said that the guidance counselors now have more time to dedicate to building positive college and university relationships through seminars, the National Association for College Admission Counseling (NACAC) conference and organized regional tours. With the assistance of college consultant Don Dickson, the staff is creating a marketing plan for college visits, consisting of a copy of the high-school newspaper, Hi's Eye, theatre programs, the new WHS profile and other material.

The department has scheduled 40 colleges and universities to visit WHS through October, and the list is available on the WHS website.

The goals of the department for this year are to mentor new staff through the year and refine the guidance program to focus on student wellness and well-being. They want to introduce a career exploration study for sophomores to help with the course-selection process and plan a parent night on wellness and well-being.

"I am very happy with the focus on wellness and well-being," said Board Vice-President Ginny Leitz.

The 2004-2005 academic year accomplishments for the guidance department include a creation of a guidance procedures manual, the introduction of a freshman brag sheet and the first annual sophomore parent night, which was held on October 18.

If parents have any questions about the college selection process, SATs, SAT-Its or any other issues, "Please call the guidance department," said Counselor Judy Glasser, a 20-year veteran to the department.

Board member Alice Hunnicutt asked Ms. Sullivan about the new career-interest inventory that is being used by the students. This is a nationally recognized system, administered and marked by the students themselves, allowing them to pinpoint career choices to aid in appropriate course selection. The Career Occupational Preference System (COPS) provides job activity scores relating to occupational clusters, offering immediate feedback to students and counselors.

The guidance team has further developed the transition program, derived from the Princeton Center for Leadership. This student-managed program allows freshmen to learn about WHS from juniors and seniors in small groups. There are currently 45 groups with 125 student leaders addressing topics such as change, friendships and stress management.

"I am thrilled to hear that there is a collegiate atmosphere in the Guidance department," said Ms. Leitz.

In other news, three WHS seniors recently qualified as semi-finalists in the National Merit Scholarship Program: Rachel Leopold, Yuchen Zhang and Jen Zhu. They attained this status through their high scores in the PSAT and represent less than one percent of New Jersey's 2006 graduating class.

In addition, 23 students were named commended students by the National Merit Scholarship Program.

The board's facilities committee met on October 6 and reported that renovations to the Franklin School restrooms will be completed by the end of October, the new Washington School boiler is out to bid and the varsity baseball field safety project has received half of its $11,000 cost from donations by local teams.

Ms. Hunnicutt, chairwoman of the facilities committee, reported that improvements to the auditorium at the high school would be completed by Sunday, November 20, as scheduled.

The board also plans on moving forward in the securing of funds from the field use surcharge that has recently been adopted by the town council. The board also briefly discussed board goals and plans for the new Citizens Advisory Committee.

Board member and Finance Committee Chairman Richard Solomon said, "The town charges a fee, and nothing goes to the school district. Maintaining fields is a significant cost to the district and there has to be an equitable distribution of funds."

SP-FHS Announces Annual College Night

SCOTCH PLAINS — The College Club of Scotch Plains-Fanwood, together with the Scotch Plains-Fanwood High School (SPFHS) Guidance Department, announces the 54th annual College Night. This year's event will be held on Thursday October 27 from 7:30 p.m. at SPFHS.

This program is open to all 11th and 12th-grade students, whether they attend SPFHS or any of the local private or parochial high schools. Organizers expect representatives from approximately 90 colleges, including Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania, Carnegie Mellon and Villanova.

"The College Night is an important tool in helping students and families plan for college," said Meril Davies, co-chairman of this year's event. "It is a great way to interact with a number of institutions of higher education, all in one place."

For more information, call Meril Davies at (908) 889-4942.

Students and their parents are requested to use the main entrance on Westfield Road.

Parents, Not Theatres, Should Monitor Children

By VINCE FITZPATRICK
Specialty Writer for The Westfield Leader and The Times

Over the years that I've spent in Westfield, I've spent more time in the Rialto movie theater than any other building downtown. During seventh and eighth grade, my friends and I would religiously head to the movies every Friday or Saturday night and catch the newest screwball comedy or action blockbuster. Occasionally, I would accompany my parents to a more dramatic show either here or at the Cranford Theater.

Now, in my sophomore year in high school, my movie-going days are fewer and farther between, but every now and then, I still manage to meet a couple of friends downtown for whatever epic we've been awaiting. However, as most kids in Westfield know, getting from the ticket window to the theater can be challenging, depending on the rating of your movie.

For most teens, R-rated movies are nothing new. The majority have been seeing them for years, whether on video and DVD or in theaters, and they have gained the permission of their parents to do so. When going out to the movies, most parents will ask about the rating and the basic plot of the movie. In any case, R-rated movies are a topic that is usually settled long before the trip to the movie store, and most parents allow their kids to see them in theaters before the suggested age of 17.

Despite the decision of their parents, kids will often not be allowed into a movie on their own. Depending on the theater, the ticket vendor may require you to have a parent or guardian give permission (as in the Rialto or Cranford), or they may actually require an adult to sit in the theater alongside the child (as in United Artists or other theater chains). This can be a hassle when no parent is nearby, and some kids turn to asking strangers to pose as parents or buying a different ticket and sneaking into the R-rated movie.

Occasionally, ticket takers or ushers who are confused about the policy also hassle them once inside. Even more irritating is the fact that underage teens are still forced to buy an "adult" ticket without having all the "adult" privileges. A friend's temper was once raised so high that, when asked about his age by a ticket taker, responded, "You're paid to rip tickets, not ask questions!" The small number of young people who go to movies against their parents wishes pales in comparison to those whose parents have consented.

Some people believe that the movie theater is required to enforce the rating system, but the Motion Picture Association of America, who created and assigns ratings, refers to them as the "Voluntary Movie Rating System." There is no law requiring theaters or moviegoers to enforce the system. On their website, the MPAA stresses, "Ratings are meant for parents, no one else." Theaters enforce the system completely by choice.

Though the rating system may be well-intentioned, the choice of what a child should be exposed to should be given to the parents and should not be censored by the movie theaters. In turn, if a young person chooses to sneak behind his/her parents' back to see an R-rated movie, the blame should be given to the child, not to the theater. Until the policy is changed, our movie theaters will do less to help parents than to lose business and anger customers.

Edison School Suspects Ax Of Murder Will Be A Hit

WESTFIELD - The Edison Intermediate School Drama Department will be performing Ax of Murder by Pat Cook as their fall drama.

Is it possible for a play to be haunted? No...it's not possible! At least that's what theater director Bonnie Bagwell, played by Sarah Szollar, grade 8, tries to convince the other members of the troupe. Meanwhile, writer Colin Chambers, played by Dan Krack, grade 8, hints at the horror that has cursed his script, Ax of Murder. Unfortunately, curiosity gets the best of the actors despite Colin's adamant warnings.

It soon becomes apparent that there is something about the play that is troubling when a police sergeant, played by Richard Barber, grade 8, shows up stating he was called in on a murder.

Wonder turns to fear as when someone is murdered? It seems as if no one could have done it. The audience won't know who or what to believe with the Edison school cast of characters (listed with grade): Lucille - Maddie DeJohn, 8; Taylor
