

Plan Your Future.

Jamie Marner
Financial Advisor
140 Central Avenue
Westfield, NJ 07091
908-518-5427
james.marner@mssb.com
www.fa.smithbarney.com/marner

Whether you are planning for retirement, education, travel or other goals, we can work together to make your objectives a reality. My approach consists of three elements:

- Assessing your current financial situation and goals
- Creating a customized strategy to achieve your future plans
- Executing your plan and protecting it as challenges arise

Contact me today to get started.

Morgan Stanley
Smith Barney

© 2012 Morgan Stanley Smith Barney LLC. Member SIPC

Fanwood Election

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

(Fanwood Police) Chief (Richard) Trigo myself. But not only can't they show it, they sit there with the same stary eyes [with which] they bought Livingston Wilbor (a property the borough purchased for $1.6 million in 2008 following its partial collapse during a construction accident at the adjacent Station Mews development)."

Fellow Republican Mike Szuch, a union electrician who builds traffic lights, agreed with Mr. Manduca on merging the police departments.

"Having our own police force gives us that old 'Mayberry' feeling that citizens appreciate," Mr. Szuch told The Times. "I'm concerned about maintaining the intimacy of the service we have, and I'm very skeptical and resistant to giving up control."

Conversely, he takes a different approach to redevelopment in downtown. A resident since 1969, he had seen Fanwood "stagnate" for a while and felt the changes "were a long timing."

"I'm committed to town. I've seen Fanwood make some pretty big changes, and I'm excited about the new developments," Mr. Szuch told The Times. He also hoped that the "flurry of development" could be a boon for the borough as it seeks to make up for lost ratables.

Jack Molenaar, vice-chairman of the Fanwood Democratic Committee, is hoping to return to the council, where he had served recently. The Recreation Commission member is currently the director of transportation services at Rutgers University.

Mr. Molenaar pushed to The Times that he would "sue harder" for shared services, which was a "main reason" for his deciding to vie for a seat on the council, where he has sat previously.

"If we can have the same service for less money, why wouldn't you do it? Even a little savings compounds over time," he said. The candidate favors a smaller-scale sharing of services as opposed to overall consolidation, which he said would be more time-consuming and less efficient. Also, since shared services are a prerequisite to an overall community merger, he said the borough would wisely be tackling "the tough stuff" first anyway.

"The best way to save money today is by starting to combine services," Mr. Molenaar said. "Eventually, both towns will realize there's no reason for them to be separate."

Asked if he was worried about longer response times if a police merger is realized, he said, "Response times will be the same or better... We're saying we're going to be the same size as Westfield Police Department and the same basic geographic area."

He said for too long Trenton has taken the wrong view of the borough. "Trenton's looking at a formula and seeing us as a doughnut town, and therefore we must be inefficient. No one's really looking to see if we are or not. They just assume we are [inefficient]. You can't have a one-size-fits-all formula... Waste can be found in all sizes."

Separately, he called the borough's redevelopment "very successful" and said he wants to continue to see it blossom. Projects are ongoing at a time when most towns have open stores, he said. He also noted that the borough was once full of old lumberyards and one-story buildings that were falling down. "Our whole goal was to create a downtown," he said.

Newcomer Daniel Levine, a corporate relocation consultant, admitted that he was initially "surprised" to be selected to run for the seat. He has worked in state government on a number of occasions — serving in the Division of Taxation during the Florio administration years and as an assistant state treasurer under the McGreevey and Codey administrations.

"I'm always interested in state and local finance, and I've become particularly interested in the whole notion of shared services, from concept to implementation. That's the issue that I'm most interested in," he said.

Mr. Levine said he "absolutely" shares the Mayor Mahr's view of not pursuing an overall merger with Scotch Plains, but rather push for a smaller-scale approach that could lead to the merging of police departments, as example.

"The first step from getting from here to there is understanding what the facts are and what the implications are with the property tax cap," Mr. Levine said. "I understand people can have some concerns about it, but I think you have to start dissecting the problem and analyzing it. We need it to be a fact-based decision-making process."

"Having municipalities cope with a budget cap, rising pension costs and rising sewer costs is going to be a real challenge, and I think going from that conceptual phase to getting it done is a challenging problem that I'd like to work on," he said.

Police Seek Motive, Suspects In Death of Ripley Pl. Secretary

The Westfield Leader archives, March 18, 1976

WESTFIELD — Police are continuing a day and night investigation of the murder of Miss Lena Triano, a 57-year-old secretary found strangled and stabbed in her home at 16 Ripley Place Monday.

Death was attributed to asphyxiation by strangulation according to the coroner, but a complete autopsy report is still awaited by Police Chief James F. Moran.

Miss Triano's body was discovered shortly after 3:30 p.m. Monday by Patrolmen Ronald Coles and Donald Lamendola and Det. Sgt. William Muth following a phone call from her employer who became alarmed when she failed to report for work and efforts to contact her failed.

Police said they have interviewed hundreds of people acquainted with Miss Triano who lived alone on the first floor of her home on Ripley PL. The upstairs apartment had been vacant for years, they said.

Neighbors reportedly saw the victim Sunday and she was known to have attended mass at Holy Trinity Church that morning. No motive has yet been found for the slaying, and there was no visible sign of a forced entry to the house. Police were forced to break into the apartment, which was locked from the inside.

Born in Westfield, Miss Triano was the daughter of the late Philip and Philomena DelGuidice Triano, a communicant of Holy Trinity Church, she was a graduate of Westfield High School and was employed as legal secretary for the Law firm of David Britkopf of 11 Hill St., Newark.

She is survived by two brothers, Anthony F. Triano of Fanwood and Joseph P. Triano of Westfield.

Funeral services are being held at 9:30 a.m. today at the Dooley Colonial Home, 556 Westfield Ave., and at 10 a.m. at Holy Trinity Church where a funeral mass will be offered. Interment will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Rewards Offered for Information On Murderer, Assailant

The Westfield Leader archives, July 15, 1976

Rewards of $750 each for information leading to the arrest and convictions of the murderer of Miss, Lena Triano and the assailant who knifed Josephine Plasecka have been offered by the Town Council. Miss. Triano, a legal secretary, was found dead in her home at 61 Ripley Pl. of strangulation and wounds Mar. 14. Miss Plasecka, of 211 Cacciola Pl. was knifed repeatedly June 30 when she apparently was surprised by an intruder when she returned home from grocery shopping. She is recovering from stab wounds. Anyone with information is advised to contact Police Chief James F. Moran who authorized the council to post the rewards.

Editor's note: Her brother Anthony, who died in 1980 at 64, owned Glen View Manor Tavern in Scotch Plains for 30 years before retiring in 1976. Glen View is now Charlie Brown's Restaurant. A search of The Westfield Leader archives in the late 1930s shows that Miss Triano received many academic and sports honors while in the Westfield public schools.

LENA TRIANO, Westfield High School's The Weather Vane, 1937... Academic Committee (2); Finance Committee (4); Nominating Committee (4); Typing Club (2, 3); Hockey (2, 3, 4); Soccer (2, 3, 4); Basketball (2, 3, 4); Volley Ball (2, 3); Tennyquist (3); A. A. Council (3); G.A.C. (3). To be a private secretary is the ambition of this dependable student, efficient helper, and excellent athlete.

Arrest Made In 1976 Murder

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

law is what it is. We can't do anything about it, but what it does tell the public and those who are involved in crimes like this... that cases are never closed," Mr. Romankow said.

The prosecutor said he would file a motion to have the suspect's name released. "I think the public has a right to know," Mr. Romankow said. "I can tell you that it is very frustrating as a prosecutor to know that you have to try someone who is 50 years of age as a juvenile," Mr. Romankow said.

Mr. Romankow said Ms. Triano kept her back door open. However, he said when police went to the house in 1976 to check on her whereabouts after she failed to show up for work on a Monday morning, they found the back door locked and the key missing.

"I am sure that's how access was gained," Det. Byron added.

Det. Byron recognized Westfield Police Officer Nicole Stivale and Lieutenant John Ricerca for their help in the investigation, along with Prosecutor's Office Sergeant Harvey Barnwell, who attended Tuesday's briefing.

Det. Byron and Sgt. Barnwell went out into the Westfield neighborhood to talk to long-time residents about the case. Det. Byron said one told him, "If you ever find out who did this mystery, please let us know," he said.

A niece of the victim, who lives in Cranford and is the only known living relative, was told of the arrest concerning her aunt's murder. Speaking on cold cases, Mr. Romankow said the Triano case "tells us how important it is to retain evidence," noting that without the retention of evidence, the Triano murder "would have never been solved."

He said the clothes Ms. Triano was wearing at the time was a critical piece of evidence in the case.

Mr. Romankow is asking anyone who knows of anyone who was hogtied in current or old cases to call his office at (908) 527-4500. "The investigation is continuing with reference to this crime and possibly other crimes," he said.

Initially detectives began looking into the Triano homicide case in an effort to see if there was a link to a Springfield homicide that had occurred two months after the Triano murder.

"The connection was that [Ms. Triano] worked at the same firm with [the Springfield victim's] husband," Det. Byron said. The Springfield case remains unsolved.

The suspect in Ms. Triano's murder, who is employed as an oil truck driver and is not married, is being held in the Union County jail with no bail pending a release hearing in the next few days.

"Obviously, we will object to him being released," Mr. Romankow said. "This was not a random murder; we think this person lived in the area."

FW Council

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

$8 increase per household. "I think that's a good sign that things are going well," Mayor Mahr said. The average assessed household in the borough is $84,500.

Mr. Lewis proposed honoring Jim Grover for volunteer of the month. He asked where the borough stood on the state skimming money from energy taxes to fill holes in its state budget. "There is a concerted push to stop the skimming of the energy receipts. We passed a resolution last month to show our support," Mayor Mahr said.

Fanny Wood Day will be held Sunday, June 10 the mayor announced. Martine and South Avenues will be closed for the fair.

The borough also discussed holding an auction to sell five impounded vehicles, dated 1997 to 2002, with an auction date to be determined, and proceeds to go to the municipality.

A resolution will be on the table at the next meeting to mill and repave Hetfield Avenue between South Avenue and Shady Lane as part of a shared service with Scotch Plains.

Scotch Plains Election

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Scotch Plains Republicans should decide who the candidate is," the mayor told The Scotch Plains-Fanwood Times in explaining her reasons for mounting a primary challenge. She said there was "no legitimate reason" why the local GOP failed to name her as its candidate, aside from what she said were "some personal disagreements from a few years ago."

The mayor bucked her party in 2010 when she backed Dominic Bratti, a Republican council member who ran unsuccessfully for re-election as an Independent, and irked some party members two years ago when she replaced the township legal team that had been in place for some years and had been named by a township council led by then-mayor Martin Marks. She also ruffled some feathers by not reappointing party supporters like long-time zoning board of adjustment chairman Jim Fawcett and Rahway Valley Sewerage Authority Commissioner Joan Papen.

"The people — not a small group — should decide who the candidate is going to be," Mrs. Malool said. She said Republican Chairman William McClintock, a former council member himself, told her several weeks ago that she should "not bother running" and "not bother showing up" at the March 28 candidates screening because the party apparatus was lined up against her by a two-to-one margin. "I didn't think it was right to run away and give up," the mayor said. At last week's screening, Mrs. Malool lost to Mrs. DePaola by a 20-15 vote.

Mrs. Malool also accused Mr. McClintock of engineering a last-minute change in the party's bylaws that prevented several members supportive of Mrs. Malool from voting last week. Mr. McClintock told The Times the bylaw changes were made in order to ensure that only those committee members who were regular attendees at party meetings were allowed to vote on candidate selections; he pointed out that the vote to change the rules had been unanimous.

The mayor lamented that what she termed to be a "personal vendetta" against her has had an "impact on the town government." She said she has "served the town well, probably through one of the most difficult times we've had," alluding to the recessionary economy when she took office in January 2009 and then the town being without a manager during its critical budget deliberations that winter and spring.

"The town's been efficiently run," she added. She said finding "good people" to serve in elective office will be difficult if the local Republicans simply want to "put in people who will just listen to what they say." That, the mayor told The Times, will lead to the "same political hacks" being elected repeatedly.

Mayor Malool questioned why Mrs. DePaola — "someone who claimed to be my friend" — was opposing her, given that "she's agreed with me 99 percent of the time" and "for three-and-a-half years, she told me she wouldn't run against me."

For her part, Mrs. DePaola, who has served as deputy mayor since January 2011, declined to comment on the mayor, saying she preferred to focus on her experience and leadership. She told The Times she was running for mayor because, "I like serving the town, and the way for me to serve is through leadership." She said that, "We've reached a point where we need some strong Republican leadership in town. I'm the person to step up and take a strong leadership role."

The third council Republican, William Vastine, told The Times he backed Mrs. DePaola because "the single biggest issue in this campaign is going to be the [Scotch Plains and Fanwood] police department merger, not the summer concert series, as Mr. Glover seems to think." Mr. Vastine said he felt Mrs. DePaola supports a more aggressive attempt at combining the two departments than Mayor Malool. And he said he and Mrs. DePaola disagreed with the council's decision to use $100,000 in surplus funds from the sewer utility to lessen the overall property-tax increase this year.

Mr. Glover was elected to the council in 2006, lost to Mayor Malool in the 2008 mayoral race and was re-elected to his council seat in 2010. He told The Times this week he believes the township is "starting to turn the corner," and said he believes he has contributed to that in terms of promoting a more open municipal government, more dialogue, urging new ways to save taxpayer dollars and pushing more shared services. On the last point, Mr. Glover said he seeks an increased shared-services relationship with Fanwood that "will benefit both towns significantly through better services and reduced costs."

He said the township government, recognizing that it cannot rely as much on help from Trenton, "needs to come to grips with financial reality and work to navigate it." Without getting into specifics seven months before the election, Mr. Glover said he would work to "propose a vision and a strategy to make the town even better than it is, and we have to begin by reducing property taxes."

His running mate, Mrs. Gialanella, who is making her first run for elective office, is an educator who works for the Clark School District. Her husband is a law enforcement officer and they have two children.

Scotch Plains Council

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

permitted. But he said that he thought such sidewalk displays "don't lend themselves to the betterment of the downtown."

Mayor Malool agreed, saying the ordinance allowing sidewalk displays should be revised to limit it to tables and chairs in front of restaurants. The planning board presently is examining current ordinances, and Mr. LaCosta said the board would examine the sidewalk-display ordinance in the course of its evaluation. Councilman Glover, while saying that sidewalk displays "should not be a mess," also said the store "does good work" in raising money for animals and felt the sidewalk displays "gets customers to come in."

The council was split on a proposal from Councilman Glover, the liaison to the Memorial Day Parade Committee, on sponsoring a concert on the Sunday prior to the Memorial Day parade and ceremonies. Three years ago, the nascent Scotch Plains Management Corporation, in an effort to boost downtown businesses, sponsored an all-day music festival after the traditional parade — an event that angered many veterans who preferred the day be set aside for solemn ceremonies and remembrances.

Mayor Malool expressed concern about the veterans' reactions, but Mr. Glover vowed a "highly dignified concert," recalling the pre-Memorial Day concert by the Marine Corps Band several years ago. The mayor said it was important to gauge the veterans' opinions before moving forward on any serious effort to hold a concert. Mayor Malool and Mrs. DePaola also raised the issue of costs — particularly for police and public works overtime.

The council also approved advertising for engineering and construction services in connection with needed repairs on nine storm outfalls, which are where storm water drains into brooks and streams. An estimated $290,000 to $350,000 will be required for the repairs, which include stabilization of banks, and a variety of state environmental permits also will be necessary, according to Robert Lynes of Hatch Mott Macdonald, the township's consulting engineering firm. Funds for the repairs are available in two existing bond ordinances from 2006 and 2010. "The money's there; this needs to be done," Mayor Malool said. Lesser repairs to several other drains have already been completed, Mr. Lynes told the council.

At the start of the meeting, the council officially named Mr. LaCosta and Township Clerk Bonnie Lacina as co-managers, replacing the Chris Marion, who recently resigned to take the position of business administrator in Old Bridge Township.

CLAIM SERVICE SO GOOD IT'S GUARANTEED

YOU CAN QUOTE ME ON THAT

Introducing the Claim Satisfaction Guarantee.

I hope you never have a car accident. But if you do, it's nice to know you'll be happy with your claim experience. Guaranteed. If not, you'll get a six-month credit on your premium. Sound good? Call me today.

Nelson C. Espeland, LUTCF
(908) 233 6300

The Espeland Group
Scotch Plains
nelson@allstate.com

Subject to terms, conditions, and availability for a limited time on standard auto policies (and all TX auto policies). Premium credit will vary based upon vehicle involved and term of underlying policy. © 2011 Allstate Insurance Company

Craftsman Karl

KITCHENS

Designing • Installation • Remodeling

30 YEAR ANNIVERSARY

Karl Gerckens has been creating beautiful kitchens for 30 years

www.craftsmankarl.com • 522 Central Ave., Westfield • 908-377-6761 • email: craftsmankarl@verizon.net