Therapy Can Help Couples Attain Marital Harmony

Like love or peace, harmony is a desirable state in any relationship, especially in the institution of marriage. It is a challenge for those who are willing to work for it. Most married people might raise the question, is there such a thing as marital harmony? It is a good question that is followed by more questions: Why is it that so many spouses who claim to love one another, cause emotional hurricanes and storms? Why do we verbally attack people who we love? Why are we so irritable? Why do we overreact to a slight provocation to the point of rage? Could it be that certain experiences keep poking into the present? All these questions that surface in our minds create a challenge for us. We need viable answers. Those who plan to continue their relationships harmoniously need to understand fully the realities of life with another person.
