

Removal Of POTUS Because Your Candidate Lost Is Outrageous

Watching President Trump and our First Lady, Melania, on their trip to England made me proud that they are representing the USA abroad. They were welcomed warmly and I understand that his approval rating has risen with the Brits. Unfortunately, here in the United States, a segment of the population does not view him favorably.

I have come to the conclusion that it wouldn't have mattered which Republican had been elected in 2016. The Democratic Party cannot comprehend how their candidate, Hillary Clinton, had lost the election. The fact that she is obviously a cold person and does not recognize her own shortcomings is foreign to them. I believe it was during the third debate she herself brought up the subject of the Russians tampering with our elections. She also went on to castigate candidate Trump for not committing to accept the outcome of the election should he lose. Clinton was not asked that same question.

Well, she lost and has yet to completely accept the fact that she was not a strong enough candidate to beat him perhaps even with help of the powers that be. (Not going into that mess in this letter.)

Hillary just doesn't get it and is a sour, miserable loser sitting there feeling sorry for herself and not allowing her own wounds to heal. And there are those who have climbed on her band wagon because their own efforts to foil Trump were unsuccessful and they are not quite sure what the future holds for them now that AG Barr has been given the go ahead to release piles of documents related to the Russia investigation. Notice how the plot has thickened. Immediately after the '16 election, the Dems went on the attack against Trump pulling shenanigans of all sorts with many threatening to start impeachment proceedings. And a couple among them like Rep. Maxine Waters of California started chanting "Impeach 45" even before he was sworn in. They declared that the Mueller Investigation would provide the evidence to remove this President from the White House. Millions of taxpayer dollars later, the Democrats are woefully disappointed as there was no collusion found and for all intents and purposes Trump and his campaign were vindicated.

The House of Representatives is still on the march and now criticize Robert Mueller, their not so long ago hero, as not having done a through enough job. They remain convinced after almost two years of investigating that there is something not uncovered and are moving forward on their own to poke into Trump's personal and business records. No less than three congressional committees have subpoenaed his records. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi has promised to continue the harassment of the president and his family and has actually said the same adding "I'll be satisfied when we have a new president of the United States who is Democrat." So it is reasonable to conclude that it wouldn't matter which Republican it was who won beating Hillary Clinton.

Rep. Al Green, Dem. of Texas, has been calling for impeachment since 2017 and recently told MSNBC Saturday that he is "concerned if we don't impeach this president, he will get re-elected." If that doesn't say it all I don't know what does.

To call for the removal of a POTUS because your candidate lost and you don't like the one elected is absolutely outrageous. To think that because one holds an elected office that one knows better than our average citizens wouldn't be looked upon kindly by most voters. I doubt that this is not what the founding fathers had in mind.

Westfield Benacchio Announces for First Ward Council, Kick-off Party

Saturday, my daughter's softball team lost a close playoff game - both teams were excellent. I told the kids afterward that they had been good players all season, but what I loved most was that they had been great teammates to each other. What a great way to live! Through coaching, I found that kids are eager to listen, learn, and share if you meet them halfway; a little understanding opens a lot of doors. I know their trust is a gift that must be returned with genuineness. And they have high standards - trying your next move after 14 eight-year-olds roll their eyes at you in unison when you tell them about the drill you had planned.

Rob Benacchio

I can't think of a better way to spend my time than giving back. But there's more I can do for our kids, for our neighbors, and for our community. That's why I'm running for town council in Ward 1. And the values I've described here and impart on my teams are exactly what you can expect from me as your councilman. I'll listen, respect your trust, and encourage your high expectations. In fact, I'll make that my campaign slogan: Expect More. Expect me to provide specific goals to address the issues we face as a town. Expect me to introduce, revise or eliminate an unnecessary ordinance each month I'm in office. Expect me to initiate swifter action to jump start a stalled Downtown revitalization and neighborhood watch. Expect me to offer more for our parks and fields than concepts that won't be enacted for years, forcing another generation of Westfield kids to play home games in other towns. Expect the council committee meeting minutes that were promised but not delivered. Expect more direct and frequent communication from me - Facebook polls and election year visibility don't cut it. Simply put: We live in Westfield. We should expect more.

Lastly, a little about myself. I've lived in Westfield over 10 years with my wonderful wife, Michele and our three kids, Layla, Kara and RJ. I've coached my daughters in flag football, basketball, softball, and soccer. I've served Westfield as a member of the zoning board of adjustment, where I've done my best to help neighbors navigate an unfamiliar process with clear explanations, friendly demeanor and reasoned votes. I'm completing my second term as president of the alumni association at my alma mater, Drew University, after 20 years of service on its board. I'm a labor and employment and commercial attorney now working in commercial real estate sales, where I assist clients with their real estate needs and business operations.

I'm kicking off my candidacy for Ward 1 council on Thursday, June 13 at 6 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus on North Avenue. It's free. I hope you'll stop by to say hello and spend time with neighbors. Martin Marks And Harris Pappas Submit Petitions For General Election

Martin Marks of Cranford and Harris Pappas of Springfield have submitted their nominating petitions to run as independent conservatives for the New Jersey General Assembly in the 21st Legislative District in the General Election to be held Nov. 5, 2019, according to a press release from the candidates.

The release went on to say that Mr. Marks, a dentist, is the former mayor of Scotch Plains where he served on the township council for 12 years from 1997 to 2008. Mr. Pappas, an independent mortgage broker, served on the Springfield Township Committee from 1992 to 1994 and held several senior-level purchasing positions in both state and county governments in New Jersey over several decades. The 21st District Assembly seats have been held for many years by Republicans Jon Bramnick and Nancy Munoz.

"Based upon the razor thin margin by which they won just two years ago, and the fact that neither of their respective home towns of Westfield and Summit can any longer be considered Republican strongholds, Bramnick, Munoz, and the New Jersey Republican establishment are justifiably concerned about losing these seats with Marks and Pappas in the race," according to the release.

"Since announcing our independent candidacies in March, we have received numerous overtures of support from many individuals, including Republicans, Democrats and Independents who are all disgusted with the constant fighting in Trenton. At the same time we have been urged by those in the Republican establishment who support the status quo to not follow through with our candidacies," Mr. Marks said. "It all culminated with a meeting at Union County Republican Headquarters on April 30. At that meeting were Bramnick and Munoz in addition to NJGOP Chairman Doug Steinhart, NJGOP Executive Director Theresa Winegar, Republican National Committeeman William Palatucci, and District 21 Senator Tom Kean, Jr. Harry and I would have agreed to suspend our candidacies had Bramnick and Munoz agreed to hold a press conference stating their support for the entire Republican ticket in both this year's General Election and the General Election of 2020 led by President Trump. They flatly refused."

Mr. Pappas added, "One of the main premises of our campaign is that Jon Bramnick has been unnecessarily aggressive in attacking a sitting Republican President instead of focusing his energy as Assembly Minority Leader on the destructive tax policies of the most liberal governor New Jersey has ever dealt with. Additionally, we believe Bramnick and Munoz have taken for granted and been dismissive of those Republicans in the 21st Legislative District who identify as conservative and Trump supporters. In light of this, we don't believe asking Bramnick and Munoz to voice support for the entire GOP ticket in both the 2019 and 2020 General Elections was asking too much. Now that our petitions have been submitted we intend to proceed with our campaign and raise the funds necessary to be successful in November."

Murphy's Short-Term Thinking Will Cause More to Exit Our State

TRENTON, N.J. - Assembly Republican Minority Leader Jon Bramnick (R-21st, Westfield) criticized Gov. Phil Murphy's justification to raise $536 million in new taxes to return a $125 tax credit as property tax relief.

"Raising taxes to give people $125 is just another scheme that doesn't solve the property tax problem," said Mr. Bramnick.

A $125 refundable tax credit amounts to about 1.4 percent of the average annual property tax bill of $8,767 in New Jersey, which has the highest property taxes in the country.
